EDUCATION

MFA Theatrical Design, emphasis in lighting design, May 2008
University of Texas at Austin

BFA Theatre Studies, University of Texas at Austin May 2001

EDUCATION POSITIONS

Assistant Professor, George Mason University September 2013-May 2017

Courses Taught:

“Lighting Stagecraft”, practical and theoretical instruction on becoming theatrical electrician.

“Fundamentals of Production”, Students explore current practices and their historical development in areas including lighting, scenery, costumes, and sound. Fundamental concepts, individual skills, and collaboration are taught in both classroom and shop environments.

“Lighting Design”, Introduces the fundamentals of lighting design, including research, paperwork communication, and technology for lighting. Analyzes texts from designer’s perspective.

“Advanced Lighting Design”, In-depth study of lighting design, focuses on the aesthetics of stage lighting and advanced conceptualization and communication of design ideas.

“Text in Production”, In-depth investigation of collaborative nature of theatrical arts. Examines discrete creative disciplines; acting, directing, dramaturgy, and design as discussed by distinguished professionals and scholars.

“Acting I”, Students practice contemporary acting techniques in individual and group exercises, thus expanding awareness of human behavior, thought, and language.

“Computer Aided Design” (course author), Exploration of technology available to theater artists including video editing, rendering techniques, and image manipulation. Design projects reflect the variety of ways theater artists use technology to effectively communicate ideas and stories.

“Projection Techniques” (course author), Fundamentals of projection for the entertainment industry, including content creation, paperwork communication, and specification.

“Principles of Design”, Students explore various methods in the creation of visual images and design paperwork of sets, costumes, lighting, sound, and props. Design projects will emphasize research of specific historical periods, budget considerations, and the development of communication and presentation skills.
